The state of New Jersey wants to pay you up to $3,000 to upgrade your underground tank

Because of recent changes enacted by the state, almost all New Jersey homeowners are now eligible to receive funds to upgrade their underground storage tank.

The Petroleum Underground Storage Tank Upgrade Remediation and Closure Fund was first established in 1997 and only applied to tanks that leaked. Money for the fund, administered jointly by the New Jersey Economic Development Authority and the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection comes from corporation taxes levied by the state.

On Aug. 2, 2006, Governor Corzine signed legislation that enacted important changes to the fund. The change gives a homeowner the power to be proactive. You can now apply for a grant to upgrade a tank BEFORE it leaks.

A $3,000 tank grant is available.*

The largest available grant provides up to $3,000 to upgrade a nonleaking underground storage tank. Homeowners can choose either a new, corrosion-protected underground oil tank or a modern, aboveground tank, which can be installed in a basement, backyard, garage or utility room.

The vast majority of New Jersey residents are eligible.

There are three main criteria for qualifying.

- 1. You must have a federal taxable income of LESS than $250,000.
- 2. Your net worth must be less than $500,000 (excluding your primary residence and pension).
- 3. You need to demonstrate that repaying a loan would be a financial burden. The state has a very liberal test to determine what is a hardship.
